Norwegian Smoked Salmon

Distinguished by its peachy-pink color, the Norwegian salmon has a dense smoky flavor and strong aroma. The texture is silky smooth, with a touch of oil, and a flavor that is subtly salty.

Scottish Smoked Salmon

Scottish salmon is the perfect union of silky texture, balanced smoke, and total sophistication. The Scottish smoked salmon's flesh is incredibly tender and buttery, with a color that has an orange-pink hue.

Gravlax a.k.a. "The Gateway Fish"

Gravlax is an age-old Scandinavian specialty of salmon that is cured and coated in a delicate brine of salt, sugar, dill, and other secret ingredients. This specialty of salmon is never smoked. It has a sweet-herb flavored bite with a fresh and clean finish.

Belly Lox

Belly lox, often simply called lox, is salt-cured and not smoked. The lox is salty, fishy and briny, begging for the cream cheese to cut through the flavors. Belly lox are perfect for a bagel sandwich.

Steelhead

Rainbow, or Steel Head Trout, is a type of Pacific salmon but has a deeper, meatier flavor. Its lean body captures the light wood smoke wonderfully for a rich flavor. This fish is a tad saltier, but not much, and has a slightly sweet finish.

Kippered Salmon

Also called "baked salmon," kippered salmon is an appetizing classic. The special hot-smoking process imparts an incredibly moist texture and rich flavor.

Whitefish

A smoked whitefish laid out on the table is the centerpiece of many family gatherings. Native to the Great Lakes, whitefish are hot smoked to perfection to give your palette a moist, dense, and smoky experience.

Sable

Line caught in Northern Pacific waters, this black cod is smoked to our specifications and then dusted with a thin coat of paprika to lock in its natural moistness and round out the flavor.

Sturgeon

This delicate white meat produces an absolutely unique flavor: it is clean and earthy, sweet and delicate all at the same time. It is no surprise that the fish that gives us caviar would be just as sumptuous when smoked.

Eastern Nova

Mild and succulent, this is classic Nova at its finest. Any palate will savor the classic taste and satiny texture. While this variety traditionally came from Nova Scotia, we source our fish from more sustainable farms in Scotland and Norway.
